Acanthus 'Whitewater'

Clive's Comments

It seems the more things change the more they stay the same. Small to medium business has, and probably always will, require long hours, personal commitment plus risk by the owners, a bit of stress and a mix of good times and bad. Sometimes we question the return and wish we had a regular day time job with regular pay. The reality is most of us would go mad.

The satisfaction of seeing good product being sent to loyal customers is great. The pleasure of getting the production right and the quality high is also good. The ability to manage your hours to suit family when needed is also a good bonus. We are also in an industry that is producing a product that everyone loves and returns to the environment.

When we have good times we get so busy we don't know where to turn but it can be exciting racing to fill orders and managing the production/purchasing to replace what is despatched. It is so busy that time flies and all of a sudden it slows down and we start to look for more sales. Then we stress about cashflow until the next busy period.

Seems it has been this way for the 35+ years I have been doing this. As I get older the more I learn that every time we have some slow weeks we will soon have some busy ones. I do remember when I didn't know this and would be worried sick that sales wouldn't pick up. The elder folk in the industry would talk about busy times and not worry too much about the quiet ones...

...In fact it seemed that nursery operators were the eternal optimists. Every year winter and summer would be tight but we were always going to have a great autumn/spring. When we didn't; "well there is always next year!"

We are all as much alike as we are different. We have different business models and work in various sectors. I like the wholesale/propagation side as we can always get on the phone or email and chase orders when it slows down. However we don't get to meet our customers very often – for some that is a positive. Also we may have to chase payment which is never pleasant. Whereas retail you do get to meet and know your customers but when sales slow it is very hard to drag n buyers.

Some manager/owners like to have a wide range of products, spread of customers and several business income streams. Others like to focus in on a small range of products and only a few customers. Like football teams, politics, religion and the great Holden/Ford debate each will argue vehemently why their philosophy is best. Silly as we all know that Holden was the best!

We can sit and navel gaze on the hassles of cash flow, staff shortages, interest rates, rising input costs and all the other things that slow us down. However it is far better to be positive and constantly look for opportunities and silver linings. Maybe as we get older we do get wiser but we also start to look at choices we have made. Some will wish they had but most of will be glad they did. Just be happy to be alive!

Speaking of getting older and wiser I would like to remind us that as we get older so does our need to ensure that we pass on what we have learned. Some industries this is not an issue as the knowledge levels are not unique and easily learned. Some like ours are hard to learn, extremely deep and take many years to compile a good understanding of how plants grow. That doesn't even include the business and historical production skills we all gain from years in business.

Gives me a segway (hate that word but we all know what it means) to promote IPPS. We should all know that the motto is "to seek and share" with a base premise that we must ensure the young and new entrants in our industry have the greatest exposure to new and old knowledge. Our 2025 conference is in Cairns in late May. It starts with a pre-conference tour of two days to Cape Tribulation and Port Douglas. Then two half and a full day of plenary sessions on a huge range of plant production topics. Add in two half days of visits to nurseries on Atherton Tablelands and south Cairns/Innisfail regions and the conference will be full of learning opportunities. Also great food, wine and entertainment in a lovely warm climate. Finally straight the after the conference one of our passionate members will lead a small group up to Cape York. Can't wait!!!!!!

It is also the season to be positive. Santa will be here soon and he will be quickly followed (and for some of us preceded) by masses of delicious food and drink. However the best part for most of us is the sheer joy that the young ones have at Christmas. We all have our own memories of the excitement of waiting to open the presents and that pleasure never dies.

All of us here at Larkman Nurseries wish all of you, your families and staff the best of the best in the festivities that are Christmas and the New Year.
