Clive's Comments

Another month and still in lockdown. March seems a lifetime ago and we all thought this would be over quickly. It is now September and the virus is still running wild but the closures are causing long term damage to our society. Our war is dragging on and I worry about the social fabric of our communities.

Imagine telling your parents in 1970 that in 50 year's time we would be banned from travelling outside the country or outside the state. Then for Melbournians not being able to move more than 5km from home, only be allowed out of the house for one hour a day and couldn't have visitors nor visit family. Living with a night time curfew and the police would be allowed to pull you over and ask to see your permit to be where you are. The idea that would have to walk around with a face mask at all times would be just too much to comprehend. Finally that a committee of eight people would be deciding every part of our daily lives with no accountability.

You parents would not believe you and would say that sounds like Nazi Germany, Stalinist Russia or the world of George Orwell. They would say that it could not be any part of Australia, but it is. We are not living with dictators like many parts of the non-democratic world but it feels like it. It is easy to understand why many people are getting angry about the loss of our democratic freedoms. They are worried that it might not end and Daniel Andrews desire to continue with the unfettered control for another twelve months is just one step too far.

Back in March/April there was frustration at the lockdown rules and worry about how we will survive. There was however a strong level of acceptance and support of what the state and federal governments were having to do. We didn't like the rules but trusted the leaders and experts. We watched other parts of the world go through the pain of Covid and felt we could avoid it. However now there is a much greater level of non-acceptance. A much greater level of distrust especially here in Victoria. We have two inquiries happening where our leaders are being asked to explain what happened during the past few months. Listen to the questions and answers and it sort of reminds you of an old Monty Python skit. The responses are just political spin at best and pure lies at worst. Definitely no answers as to why or how it went so wrong.

We also now have Australians fighting Australians. We have family in country NSW and they are telling us that people with Victorian numberplates are having their vehicles vandalised. Disgusting slurs about what they should do and where they should go. Victoria police have had 100,000 plus phone calls in four...

months from people reporting other people for breaching the lockdown rules. We have people finding any way to leave Melbourne; legal or non-legal. Then we have stupid rules being enforced by people that really must have trouble getting through the day. Not my Australia. Covid is a nasty disease that is killing and hurting people and we need to have rules to help control it but the government must bring the people along with them. They must tell us what their plan is and what is the end point. What is their plan A and plan B and what will happen if we don't get a vaccine? There are so many hard working Australians that are suffering in many ways other than from the disease. If you put your family and assets on the line and started a small business you could be at risk of losing everything. If you wanted to get ahead and were working several jobs (eg casual hospitality etc) to supplement your family's lifestyle you might not have any of those jobs. However if you had decided not work and live on social security you have had your income doubled! As I have said several times over the past few months we are very fortunate to be in the nursery industry. We have been able to keep trading right through the whole mess. We are still seen as a positive sector and people like what we produce. If you are in Melbourne you can still go to work and get out in the fresh air and socialise with your work mates sort of like the rest of the country. Mid this month and the retail nurseries should open again and gardeners will be out in force. Our reservoirs are full and there seems to be plenty of water available around the country. Normally around now we are all planning for spring and praying for dry weekends with some weekday rainfall. We are watching the sporting codes to see who will be in the finals and starting to see what horses are going to be running in November. This year the footy finals will be less of a distraction and the races may not happen. I don't think the gardeners will be too worried about the weather and once spring starts and the garden centres (in Melbourne) open up again, demand will be huge. There will be a level of excitement about what spring is bringing. This year will not have masses of people moving around the country and there will be a lot more stay at home holidays. Lots of people wanting to grow pretty and edible plants. Let us, as an industry make sure we can give them what they want. Maybe, just maybe we can have a huge surge in the popularity of gardening over all ages and cultures across the country. Have a great start to spring and hopefully next month I will be allowed to move around the community again.
