Thalictrum aquilegifolium 'Nimbus White' - Avail Nov/Dec

Photinia x fraseri 'Burgundy Beauty'

Clive's Comments

Spring in Melbourne is always nice. Weather is on the way up, trees and shrubs in flower and the air of excitement with the AFL Grand final and also the NRL gets attention. Royal Melbourne Show is on, Bathurst is around the corner and the Melbourne Cup is soon. For us plant folk it is the garden show season with a good quality show every week or two from mid-September through to late November.

As of 2018 we are now running our own plant fair at our property in Wandin. Unlike the Herb and Chilli Festival this is a relaxed event and is much easier to pull together. I think this is symbolic of our industry particularly the plant collectors and plant enthusiast side. We have so many growers who are passionate about their range of plants. They know them in all their forms, how they grow, where they like to grow and what harms them. Sometimes they have really rare and unusual varieties, sometimes they grow old fashioned cultivars that our parents and grandparents grew and sometimes they have the really new selections. Whatever it is they have knowledge and they love to share it with others.

We are running this fair to help bring these growers together with plant collectors, plant geeks and old-fashioned home gardeners. All of these...

...folk love to meet and talk plants. Some also have extensive collections and are looking for that one elusive variety to complete a set or to fill a space in the garden. Many are first time visitors to a garden show and are looking for inspiration for their own home garden. They are starting down the path of becoming a passionate gardener and will have their own plant favourites. It is a mixed bag that attends these shows and they all contribute to a great industry.

We are not a critical sector like food or clothing, but we are very important to the wellbeing of the community and the environment. Our plants produce oxygen which we all need. They remove CO2 from the air, and we know there is too much of that. Many of them give us sustenance and flavour for our food. Most of all they soften the environment and make us feel better. Indoor or outdoor the plants are a key part of modern life.

It is great to see so many younger people finding passion and inspiration in their plant choices. Sure, we might find paying $250 for a variegated Monstera a bit over the top but it is far better spent on a plant than some chemical that is sniffed or swallowed. It also becomes a talking point for this generation that we feel has been overcome by technology, screens and non-organic products. They can see a living thing that is inspiring them or making them feel relaxed. As an industry we must encourage and develop these people in their interest in plants. Don't let it become a trend that is soon overtaken by something with a screen.

We must make sure that we are open to plant collectors of all types. We must share our passion and love of our chosen plants with all and sundry. If you get asked to participate in a show, talk at a Garden Club, visit a school please do so. Every time you do you give something back to the people who make our industry viable but more importantly you may just inspire a new person to get into gardening.

This weekend is the Grand Final and we do have a holiday on the day before so that everyone can get into the mood. Personally, I think this is wrong and hurts many small businesses who either have to pay huge rates to open or close and pay more money for people not to work. However, we have this holiday and it will not go away. They never remove holidays (a decade or so ago they did amalgamate two half days into one full day) so Grand Final Eve will remain. It does put pressure on us to get all our stock out but what is life without a bit of stress?

I suspect that overtime we will all learn to live with the holiday and I also think it will become a bonus for the nursery sector. It maybe sacrilege to say this but not everyone in Melbourne follows the football. Many of those that don't will find an extra day to spend in the garden a big plus – especially in mid spring. We are just after the spring equinox, so it is a great time to plant, prune, dig and feed. I am a St Kilda supporter and like most years we are not playing in the finals so I will be half listening to the game whilst I do some work in our garden. Enjoy the second month of spring and all it has to offer and make sure you sell plenty of plants.
