Clive's Comments

It seems we have travelled through the Pandemic with minimal health issues. Indeed, on a world basis we have some of the lowest infection and death levels. This is due to many reasons, mainly because we are an island and were quick to shut our borders. Another reason was the tracing and isolation of anyone with an infection and any person who came in contact with them along with the isolation of high-risk individuals. The restriction on large gatherings of people, the social distancing and closure of high-risk businesses also played an important role.

All these initiatives kept Covid 19 from decimating the health system and the preparation for large scale admissions of virus patients was excellent. Much of it was unneeded but worth having and will benefit the community for years to come. However, we are yet to see the midterm and long-term damage to the economy and social fabric of our society from all the business closures. I suspect it will be worse than the effects of the virus (in Australia) and we will see increased cancer, heart, and mental problems for years to come. Many of the restrictions were too harsh and could/should have been relaxed once this became obvious.

The initial lockdown response in March was appropriate and has done us well but we really must release the restrictions and allow all the small businesses to return to earning money, paying bills, and employing staff. Most of the country looked at different sectors as not being...

'essential' but being valuable for the people working in them. Victoria was tighter than the other states and the statistics don't show us being better off. It seems that there was a stubbornness by the government not to review and change restrictions.

We are now moving out of the lockdown and businesses are being allowed to open and the quicker we do this the better. I feel it critical that we get as many small businesses open, trading and employing staff as possible. Every day counts and the government must make the reduction decisions as quickly as they did the lockdown ones. There is no benefit in saying to the community that you can open your café in four weeks. If it is possible then, it is possible now and that time might be enough to keep some companies solvent.

It is great to hear that the ACTU and the Government are both wanting to review the IR landscape and get people working again. However, I suspect that this is just posturing, especially here in Victoria. What they are saying is it is time to set up new protected EBAs for major corporations and unions. It is not about looking at how we can modify awards to enable more small companies employ more people. ACTU is already pushing for more sick leave, higher wages and more penalty rates and they really want to abolish Casual Workers. In some cases, they have already put in 4% wages rises for each of the next four years.

It is time the leadership of this country realise that we lost our manufacturing sector due to obscene salary packages to senior executives and directors of large companies, corporations, and departments. Couple these with crazy penalty rates and allowances and it is basic maths to see that we cannot manufacture products here and sell them at a price we can afford to pay. We must stop creating public holidays, stop increasing types and amounts of leave and stop penalising employers for employing people.

Payroll tax should be abolished. In Victoria, the Workcover monopoly makes a profit that is returned to government. Why? Same with the Transport Accident Commission, again why? Both bodies sponsor sporting groups, the arts and charities but should run at break even with minimal expenses. They are in effect a default tax on businesses and must be reduced. Do not increase compulsory super. If it is felt that 10% is not enough then take any increase out of wages not from the employer. We have some of the highest wages in the world and wonder why so many businesses move their plants overseas.

The current discussion on Casual workforce must stop. When I negotiated with the AWU to create the Nursery Award in 2009/10 we all agreed that casual wages would be 25% over permanent staff to allow for not having any form of paid leave. How dare the court system and Union movement override this and unilaterally decide we should be paying all staff all forms of leave. Now they are talking class actions to get back pay. What are they thinking?

If they really want to get Australia working again then it is time for fair and balanced working conditions and not large employers bargaining with large unions. If they really want us to succeed start basing awards on what benefits employers and employees in the SME sectors – after all that is where the majority of Australians work and the largest proportion of our GDP is created.

It is June and winter has just started but business is still strong. Let's all work and plan for a busy winter and even better spring. The community has turned to gardening for a trial, we must keep them there and buying plants.
