Clive's Comments

Last month I commented on how angry I was with the Victorian Government. It just gets worse. Glasgow is now holding the 2026 Commonwealth Games and the Victorian Tax Payer is funding it. If that isn't bad enough we have the Victorian first responders in constant battle with the government over wages. On one hand we all feel that they deserve whatever they want but on the other hand there is a limit when we have a deficit this large.

The current battle between Victorian Police and the government is getting serious. The Treasurer says that Victorian Police are well paid on most standards. Fair enough then they shouldn't get a pay rise that is well over inflation for each of the next four years. The State is broke so we all need to accept that money is tight. Then we read that the Victorian Public Service is getting a $5600 cash bonus because it is hard to live on their pay levels. Then we find out they are getting another bonus of $700 to $3000 because under crisis they may have to change their job profiles.

We are broke and can't pay the critical people in the community but can pay the pen pushers these ridiculous bonuses. Also many of them work all or part of their week from home. You ring the branch/department and get a response 'I am working from home today and will reply tomorrow'. So we the taxpayer have to work around their desire to work from home and pay them an exorbitant bonus....

...I remember my father telling me that working for the public service was a job for life. Due to the security of employment and conditions they were paid less than private enterprise. I wonder what he would say now!

Victorian state finances are in a mess but the overall Australian economy is moving forward. Our GDP is low and there are many negative indicators but due to high immigration we survive. However many Australian business are closing due to loss of sales and increasing costs. Most of these are being wound up by the ATO for BAS related debts. Still the SME community keeps going as we all passionate and hard working. We believe in ourselves even if the Government and Unions don't.

Normally the nursery industry does well when the economy slows. This due to two reasons. A propensity for the public to get in the garden when times get tough. Plus "I can't travel but I can spend time working in the garden and making life better". The other bonus is that the landscape sector covers the domestic and commercial world and is usually committed past the short fluctuations in the economy. Let's hope we can weather the storm that is hurting the small business sector.

We have other issues that we must focus on. We are very much controlled by the weather but this is quite localised. We may have a wet winter in SE Australia which is a problem but the same wet in SW Australia is a positive. What is more important and what is more interesting is the trends in plant choice.

We live and work in the fashion industry and we can all remember the days of strap plants and pebbles. Granted in an inner city courtyard this can be attractive but it really wasn't a great exposure of plants. In the late nineties the Xeriscape garden was the trend and all plants had to be drought tolerant as the rains were going to stop. Not sure if that happened.

Not only do we have trends in style but we also differing colour palettes. I remember when white was in and mauve and pink flowers on the out. We can also remember when any 'new' plant was guaranteed to sell but now the plant has to have a story. Old, new, rare or weird are all popular but it is the story behind the plant that helps it sell at retail level.

As a propagator we need to be aware of trends in colour and style before everyone else as we need to get the stock plants in. If the plants are propagated in tissue culture we need to order up to two years in advance. Tricky to get it right but it adds vibrance and interest to the plant world. This in turn makes the nursery industry a great one to work in. There seems to be a desire for the old garden plants of our parent's urban garden plus a growing interest in indoor and patio plants. Old is new and new is old!

Where will we be in 2025? Perennials or conifers or succulents or something else. Love to know what you think will be the next garden trend! Enjoy the spring race carnival and the spring planting blitz.
