Clive's Comments

Merry Christmas! Sounds funny as we are still all over the shop with Covid responses. Most of us are planning to get together with family and friends and for some states there are no real barriers. Unfortunately there are other states where the leaders put their own ideas ahead of the population. Hopefully this is the last Christmas of locked down states and separated families. For those that can travel this will be one of the best times for getting together. I spent four Christmases over seas and away from my immediate family. Three in UK with extended family that I hardly new and one in California with my partner's family. Although they were all great they were never quite the same as Christmas here with those closest to me. Mind you it could be something to do with the summer/winter variation.

Every society has a period where they get together with their family and friends, contemplate the year and plan for the future. It is usually associated with both religion and gift giving. For our basically Christian Society that has descended from European culture we celebrate this at Christmas. I think we are all hoping for a great Christmas period with the opportunity to spend the key days with those the closest to us.

Christmas virtually dominates the media, the work place and the shops from mid-October to Boxing Day. All the red decorations, gold and silver tinsel, red and white clothes, carols and of course the bearded man. Unless you adhere strongly to one of the alternative faiths in Australia you will celebrate Christmas in some form, even if it is just a matter of tripping over Santa's Sleigh. Most of us love the fables of Christmas and the carols. For some the stories are very real and form the skeleton of their faith and for others they are just stories but with messages of love and wisdom. Either way they are woven into the fabric of what Christmas means.

We all understand the importance of and resources needed to maintain the magic of Christmas. From the awesome Myer windows in CBD Melbourne to the simplest bon-bon on the Christmas table, and Carols by candlelight, Christmas Mass and finding the right gift. Everything emits a sense of joy, love and peace. Over the decades more and more trinkets and gimmicks enter the palette of our lives. The best...

Clive's Comments continued... example is the Christmas Carol that maybe a very religious song like Silent Night, a classic like White Christmas, a kid's favourite like Jingle Bells, a new one from Mariah Carey or one of the local versions, Six White Boomers. Some hate them, some love them and some of like them but get a bit weary by the end of the season. These and other traditions are what Christmas is. Seeing the magic twinkle in the eyes of a young child who still believes in Santa, Elves and the Reindeers is one of the nicest things the world has to offer. Even seeing that sense of doubt as they age and start to wonder makes you feel good. It doesn't matter if you are rich or poor it is still a great time of year. Of course there are the sad times as we remember those who have passed away since last Christmas but in its own way that to is good as it usually revolves around happy times spent with that person. Then there is the food and again the choices are wide. Personally I like the good old English style with ham, turkey, pork and all the trimmings. The recent Aussie tradition of prawns and baked Salmon is pretty good as well and this is without even looking at some of the other food items that are available. For our family tradition it is all about Christmas Day and the food. We start with ham and poached eggs, then the big lunch with Christmas pudding and end the day with cold meats and deserts. It is not just the eating but like all families we have traditions in how it is prepared and served which are important to how the day runs. We all participate in the preparation of the food and laying of the table so that it is a team effort. I feel this is important as it means no one person has to work harder than the rest and most of all it generates a true feeling of family. The young ones grow up seeing us all pulling together and finding enjoyment in setting up the day. They learn the traditions, not as a lesson but as part of life. They grow up feeling the wonder of this special day as part of their young leaves. I do find it trying when all the 'do-gooders' that decide what is and isn't right, start trying to change how we celebrate. They need to get out of people's lives and look to fixing what is broken and not pushing their philosophies on us all. Sorry, but Santa is a rotund man. He has a long white beard, wears a big red and white jacket and goes "Ho, Ho, Ho". We do not need to have some one making our kids see him as a female. He doesn't not have to take on any other attributes that some woke person feels is needed to be more 'inclusive'. Australia has built its Christmas traditions over two hundred years starting with the classic British Christmas. It has been added to with traditions from nations around the world. I have yet to meet a Hindu, or Buddhist, Jew or Muslim that wants to see us stop our way of celebrating. Most will take in a bit of the fun of Christmas and enjoy family time. We do not need to be made to feel guilty because we celebrate and have excesses whilst others don't or can't. Our hearts go out to all of those who are struggling at this time of year and many of us will contribute to make their lives better. However it is not a crime to enjoy what you have and take pleasure in being a 'consumer' for a few days in what has been a long year. We only have the one life so we should celebrate and enjoy it when we can. If the Premiers leave us be we can all have a 'bloody good time'. We can travel and be with people – some of whom have been away from us for too long – who we choose to be with. We can eat, drink, give and receive and do all those fun things that are Christmas in Australia. All of us at Larkman Nurseries wish you a great and happy Christmas. Please enjoy your break and take time to experience the best of what life has to offer. We will be!
