Clive's Comments

Happy New Year, the second of the new decade/ Looking back twelve months and it seems so recent yet so far. We were starting a new decade, the economy was ticking along nicely, weather was good but there were the fires. We all felt SE Australia was in the worst position possible and the next few months were looking sad. We were all acutely aware of how tough it had been for all those rural communities who lost their homes and farms and were struggling to deal with lack of income. We were all promising to make time to visit these towns as soon as the fires were over.

The first cloud of what has become a worldwide storm showed up in February and then by mid-March we were all in a panic. We will look at the progression of the pandemic and how it has affected us all as we move through 2021 and look back on each month the year earlier. What is sharp now is the usual feeling of optimism and anticipation we all have at the start of January each year. 2020 was normal in our minds as we had no idea of what was coming. 2021 is very different and I think it will be many years before the community has that sense of optimism and anticipation. For at least the next five to ten years we will all have an insecure fear in the back of our minds.

COVID-19 is a serious virus that can kill but it is not the real source of our insecurity going forward. There have always been major diseases and health issues that have killed many people around the globe. I feel the worst aspect of the pandemic is the level of unbridled control our state governments have over our lives. Without debating the actions of any State Premiers, we must acknowledge that 12 months ago we all felt we lived in a free and democratic country and that the government was there to run those things that we rely in for a song and healthy...

...community, education, police, health, utilities, state lands, public transport, and infrastructure.

We assumed that the government would never decree how and when and where and why we could move around our communities. We assumed that it would never take action that it knew would destroy businesses and our social fabric. We assumed that if it did any of things, we would be able to appeal and get a fair hearing. We assumed that all decisions with serious ramifications would be made by 'the parliament' and that we had certain rights. Alas we now know different and regardless if you agree with what any of the premiers did you cannot deny that they have an unbridled level of power.

Going forward I now know that if a government has the numbers it can make laws that are draconian in nature. It can declare a state of emergency that will give it powers to do whatever it wants. We have very little ability to object or appeal against their actions. If we do, we must go through their departments to get answers and if they do not want to give them then they just do not. We can argue that the pandemic of 2020 justified these powers, but the politicians have seen how easy it is to get the rules set in place. In January we had a 'state of emergency' for the fires and there was little effect on our daily lives. Then the current one was declared, and we became ruled by one person. This is not how our system is supposed to function.

Again, without debating the need for the actions taken it is scary to see what can happen. We are planning our Herb and Chilli Festival for March 2021, but we won't know for sure, until the morning of the event if we can run. Dan Andrews could at a moment's notice declare that any gathering over 20 people is banned. How do we or any business exist in a world where you can't be sure that what you plan can go ahead. We need to plan this far out (actually earlier) to make an event of this nature work. The relevant department won't give us the go ahead until a few weeks before and even then, they can stop it. We then have to refund everyone and yet still pay out to most of our suppliers.

You may well say that is just the risk we have to take, and you would be right. However, do we want to live in a world where no-one can plan anything? The local nursery wants to have a mammoth end of summer sale. They need to invest in marketing, promotion, planning etc but could have it all cancelled the day before. As a modern society we need a level of surety to enable us to plan and enjoy our lives. It is incumbent on our state governments to address this issue and bring back a level of certainty for small business to be able to plan, invest and grow.

Our industry has done well financially but we have all felt the weight of depression that has hit the wider community. One doesn't have to look far to find people who are emotional hurting. Let's find the good in the world and look for the ways we can benefit from the stresses of 2020. We wish you all a happy and prosperous 2021. Let us all hope for a happier, healthier, and more enjoyable 12 months.
