Clive's Comments

Australia really is a fascinating country. We are a large country (sixth largest by area) with a small population (54th) that is spread across a narrow few bands. Unlike most other countries our climatic range is from full tropical to cold temperate. Another anomaly is that 30% of Australians are born outside Australia and almost 50% have at least one parent born overseas. This is not the highest in the world but is well above average and adds to the complexity of our nation. Then there is the weather. Our climate is crazy in two ways. In any particular region it can be drought and heat one day and cold and wet two days later. At the same time there can be raging floods and storms then 300km away it can be dry winds and fires.

For us working in horticulture we also live in seven countries. We have known this for decades and post Covid the wider community now knows it. The biosecurity rules between states create real headaches for the movement of plants and plant products. The fact that some plants are banned in one state and with no restrictions across the border is confusing to the general public. Some states only allow specific plants whilst others allow everything. This is complicated by there not being a set list of all plants and their status within and between states. I suppose we shouldn't be surprised when we can't even have consistent road rules. All these have made it an interesting place to do business if you are supplying more than the local community....

.... . Not impossible but tricky although it does have benefits. It is possible to spread the risk with this level of variability.

Running a small business is full of ups and downs, conflicting influences, fluctuating demand and a constantly changing set of operating conditions. This is hard enough when you are making doors or wooden blocks or clothes but crazy hard when you are working in the primary industries. Doesn't matter if it is broad acre cattle ranches or small niche market fruit producers. They all have the same business pressures, the same dependence on the weather and have set selling windows. With an overriding demand driven by trends, fashions with some sectors being price takers dependent on what their customers decide what they will pay.

So how does one run a horticultural business in this great land? How do you plan for the weather? How do you try and capture such a divergent customer base? How do you plan for the negative and positive pressures?

First we need to understand the constraints and learn how to work around them. The climatic variables are what they are and we just need to be aware. Drought comes and goes and does not normally have a major effect on the nursery industry. The rains are a pain and again are not normally an issue unless they are on the weekends. The economy is out of our control but again are not a major effect on plant sales. It may change who is buying but not what is selling.

The biggest issue we have is the input costs that are out of our control. We can select what plants we grow, where we get them from and to some extent what we pay. Much the same with pots, potting mix, fertilisers and other products. What we cannot control are our base wages, worker's insurance, power, permits and government taxes and charges. Where as these used to be a smaller percentage they are now becoming a major input. We have zero control as individual businesses and only have some effect if we have a strong industry association with a desire to fight with government. Something we don't have.

Living in Victoria is the worst for these inputs as the state is bankrupt and will do whatever they can to rip more money out of small business. Every where you look they are charging more and delivering less and there is no signal that this will get better. This hurts directly as small business and indirectly as more and more Victorians have less and less to spend. The state government is adding more charges at every level of enterprise and they are getting passed on.

I don't know if our government just doesn't understand that when they add another cost to councils or big businesses it will get passed on. This will reduce what people can spend and/or hurt the profit margins. Do they understand and just don't care? It is more than 18 months until we get to vote on the performance of our state government. It is only a matter of weeks until we can pass comment on the Federal Government.

Interesting to see what will happen as the polls are all over the place. The scary thing is that it is really looking like a minority Labour with support from the Greens, Teals and other independents. With standard of living in decline and a federal budget that is going well into the red, a minority government is a worry. At least Labour is aware of the need to be fiscally responsible where as the others don't care. If a minority government occurs we are in for a rocky few years.

Hope you have a great Easter and at least my footy team is looking ok (St Kilda).

Clive Larkman

Do you want or need to import live plants?

If so, you may need to use a Post Entry Quarantine facility (PEQ)

- We have a PEQ facility with ability to handle the majority of plants
- Deflask tissue culture in PEQ or in regular nursery conditions
- Advise on packing and handling to minimise risk to plant health
- Assist in obtaining import permits
- Organise fumigation and insecticidal dips
- Will collect from airport
- Ship Australia wide once cleared PEQ (WA restrictions for new varieties may apply.)
- Pot on into larger pots post PEQ
- Bulk up stock post PEQ
- 30 years experience in plant importation
- 35 years experience in plant growing
- Handle one plant to several thousand.
- Fully licensed with Biosecurity and Bordel Control
