Clive's Comments

It seems we just cannot win with governments and large corporations. Some years ago our power bill started arriving with a new charge called 'Demand Charging'. I rang the power retailer and they said it was the wholesaler. Rang them and they said it was the retailer. After a few weeks of this it resulted that it was a generator charge and up to the retailer if they passed it on.

It seems that the charge is the highest 30 minute power usage between 4 and 6pm Monday to Friday. This is then multiplied by a $/kwh that they set depending on overall usage. The argument is that if that is your maximum usage they have to ensure there is that much power available all day so they are charging this in case I need it. In other words I am paying for power I am not using may not even want to use.

I rang and emailed all energy ministers and shadows in state and federal government. No-one could explain it and none showed any concern that it was unfair to charge me for power I wasn't using. I said it was like me asking everyone who buys plants, how many plants they plant every weekend and then working out a charge based on their busiest weekend and applying that to their property every week in case they want to plant out the garden. I have to grow the plants in case they want to plant them.

Originally this was around $30 per quarter so I gave up the fight. Now it is around $200 to $300 and I still cannot get any answers. So perhaps I need to...

...buy some big batteries and run everything off the battery during that time period. Which gets me onto the solar revolution. It seems the more solar power we use the higher the power companies raise their charges to compensate.

When solar panels first came out the feed-in tariff was $0.62 and now it is under $0.05. They are now talking about removing all feed-in tariffs. This is pretty rough as they are taking our solar power and selling it for $0.30 at no cost to them. That is a good margin but one rumour I heard was that one power company is suggesting they will charge us for any power we feed back into the grid. Even better business case – we pay them to take our excess power and sell it!

Victorian Government is trying to stop gas in this state. Not sure what they are thinking as we already have power shortages during peak periods. Also our street does not have enough power as it is and we often have power fuses in the street, blow. I am sure this would be the case across most of the state. To replace some of the big gas furnaces would need really high levels of electricity. Not sure where it will come from. All we can hope is that we get ALP out of office nationally and in the states and that the Coalition starts to revisit the whole power supply issue.

NT voted a few weeks ago, ACT last week, Queensland this week and in Victoria all the local councils are having elections. It will be interesting to see where these all go. I suspect that ALP and the minor parties will do well in the cities and the Liberal/National block will do well in the regions. This is what has happened in much of Europe as the broader community says enough of the modern philosophies. They just want to return to simple life without high immigration, high state debt, rampant child criminal activities, rising taxes and forced cultural changes.

There are many positives about life in the 21st century with easier travel, better health outcomes and, for many, a higher standard of living. We are living longer and healthier lives and are able to experience a lot more of what the world has to offer. Most people have little real bias to others and will accept anyone into their social groupings. They will contribute to their communities in ways that suit their lives and react to being told who they will like/not like, what their children will learn.

It is time the governments, large corporations and 'social' controllers back out of our lives and let us be who we want to be. Their job is to facilitate a society where we can all live, work and play in safe independent communities. Where we can grow lots of different plants and even grow much of our fresh food.
