Clive's Comments

Australia is going to the polls on May 3rd. By the time you read this there is a good chance that the election will be over. As I wrote about last month Victoria is bankrupt and getting worse. I fear that we are heading down the same path on a Federal level. Almost all the main parties are just looking at ways to spend more of our taxes on stuff we don't really need. They are talking about $1trillion of debt in the near future. Unfortunately the only party that is talking about this and how to reduce it, in their publicity is the Trumpet of Patriots. Scary!

I would love to say that this is the fault of the Labour Party, or Greens or Liberals or even blame the press. The problem is the major parties and the media spend a fortune on polls and focus groups and they have learned that the voting public is mostly focused on 'what is in it for me?'. Just listen to them! They keep trying to buy our votes. Tax cuts, more on Medibank, more subsidised houses, more wages, more, more, more and more. Then we will get the tax cuts for the workers and cuts to debts they owe. Basically the Government wants to spend a load more money and cut the tax income at the same time!!

Try and find a business owner who agrees that the best way forward is to cut income and increase expenses. This is the quickest path to bankruptcy. The government wants to cut taxes for the lower income earners. What I fail to understand is the logic here...

....The bottom earners in Australia pay the smallest percentage of Australia's tax income yet the big earners pay 90% or more yet the media focuses on cuts to the bottom income tax rate. They pay the least tax and create the greatest headlines!

When will we get a true debate on how to manage the country's finances? When will the media start talking about how a deficit of $1trillion is just bad!! Finally we are seeing that the $180billion debt of Victorian Government is not a good idea. Media is regularly mentioning the risk this holds for the state's finances. The $25million a day in interest is crippling all out public sectors yet the media is quiet. This is probably because most Victorians just don't care. When will they??? Why can't the media be responsible and start to educate the voters that we must all live within our income. Try and get them to understand that $25million a day is just not sustainable nor is it sensible!

I sit here and listen to the debates and the ads and I just cannot see a real honest campaign on what will make living here better. It is like we blame the supermarkets when they sell milk at $1 but do we go and buy from the competitor who is selling it at $2 and paying the farmer what they need? No. When we had a car industry we all wanted Government to subsidise the big three. We were angry when they left. All staff in those companies from CEO to production line worker were paid multiples above what was paid to Asian producers and we wondered why their cars were so dear. Did the community pay the extra? No they bought the cheap imports so the local manufacturers went broke.

Personally I would love a government that came to the election promising to cut the fat from bureaucracy, leaves taxes where they are and stop the ridiculous levels of red tape. A government that would promise to stop the petty levels of compliance that are hurting so many families and individuals at all levels of government. It is time the government and media focused on how to make the lives of ALL Australians better. Stop buying votes and start building the foundations of a strong and fair Australia.

Clive Larkman
