Clive's Comments

Another year is here and we are all hoping – expecting? – it to be a good one. No matter what happens in one year we always expect better things in the next one. Some things won't change too much. We know it will be hot this month and next, we know there will be all sorts of discussions about Australia Day and when or if it should be celebrated. We assume that it will probably rain during the Sydney Test and that there will be some long hot matches at the Australian Open. Then February is here.

Speaking of February, I just received an invitation to the 60th anniversary of the first day at the secondary school I attended. 7th February is 60 years since the first day of school at Yarra Valley Grammar School. I started year seven (first form then) in 1972 and our class was the Foundation Year. We had a few students who had started Grade One on 8th February in 1966. Such a long time ago, even pre-decimal currency. It was (and still is) a really good school and I enjoyed and benefited from my six years there. Simon and...

...Martin both went there and also made long term friendships and received a good education.

Thinking about life as a teenager at a good school is usually positive. Granted some had a hard time at secondary school due to conflict with teachers, family or other students but most of the people I grew up with would say they had a positive time. We studied, partied, played sports and tried to maximise the best of times. I am sure my friends and I did a few things that could have got us into real trouble. Drinking at parties and anywhere the parents wouldn't find us, smoking a bit of marijuana (even just smoking then could get you into trouble), getting home late and spending long afternoons with our girlfriends. A long kiss was pretty special and close to as far as most of us went then.

I enjoyed my Saturday sport even if some cold winter mornings were a bit rough. Training after and before school was also a thing to whinge about but it kept us fit and healthy. It taught us to win (rarely for me) and lose. The rest of the weekend we spent anywhere but home. We walked the streets, hang out at skating rink, 10 pin bowls, football ground or at friends with big houses away from the parents. During summer we were often down the beach surfing (and partying) with friends. Sometimes a parent would drive us but mostly we would hitchhike there.

If not down the beach we would be out on the motor bikes riding in places we were not really supposed to be. I remember a few times racing away from the police – them in the cars and us on the bikes. Never got caught but we were pretty scared of the police then. Of course in the later years we had to spend most evenings and some weekend time studying. No "google" then but books. We would have our own then borrow from friends and even go to the library.

It really was an idyllic life where I grew up but also for most of us if we put the rose tinted glasses on. All we had to worry about was getting the homework handed in, being selected for the soccer/footy/cricket team and where we would go with the girlfriend. Some times we would be dumped and feel crap for a week or two but to be honest nothing of any major concern. Certainly no bills to pay, staff/boss issues or any of those things that give us stress as adults.

Basically we live in a great country and were given so many opportunities to achieve our goals. The world was a big place and we were truly only limited by our own imagination. We also lived in an ideal time where our families didn't have to struggle just to survive. Sure most of us weren't rich but we had what we needed. We had healthy food, spent as much time outside as in and could walk the streets with a sense of security and weren't at risk of getting into violent situations. We had respect for our parents, teachers, police and others. We would avoid trouble.

Current teenagers have a different set of worries and pressures but if they are street smart they are unlikely to get into trouble and also have fantastic opportunities. Neither better nor worse but quite different, they just need the confidence and imagination to strive. Australia is still a good place to live and grow up. Granted there are many families that are struggling at the moment but there is still room for most to move up and out. Sometimes we do need to trim expectations to match resources but we should not limit our aspirations. There are so many stories of people who refused to be held back by barriers – perceived or real!

The best asset we can have is self confidence and a desire to succeed. The next is a good network of family and friends who can give support and a nudge when needed. Finally to do all this a good diet is a must. Not a boring super healthy food selection but good food. Well cooked and with great flavours.

I hope Santa was good to you and we at Larkman Nurseries wish you all a very happy and prosperous New Year – whichever one you celebrate! Let's all make 2025 the best year we can!

Clive Larkman
