Clive's Comments

Lavandula angustifolia 'Alba'

"A month is only 30 days but" is how I started last month as the news of Covid-19 was just starting to break and the world began the panic that is now global. Like so many things that happen around the world now this has spread far quicker than anything before. News is almost instant with every day starting with reports of the previous day's statistics of infections, deaths and change rates around the major countries Covid-19 present. Australia is now moving up the 'curve' with rates increasing by around 15% a day. How long will this continue? When we get to the peak will the lockdown be relaxed?

There is definitely a health risk and if we are like most other countries, we will run at around 0.5 to 1.0% death rate which is around double a bad flu season. If you are in the at-risk group this rate is around 5 to 8% which is scary. Unlike other pandemics the world media and key world bodies are heavily focused on what is happening which has some negative implications but one really strong positive one.

Everyone is agreed that we need to first develop some medications for treatment and then develop a vaccine. What normally takes two years at absolute best is likely to happen in a matter of months or better. All key bodies are throwing resources at the research and they are also co-operating and sharing results. Clive Palmer has contributed millions to help find and import key medicines. It is a true global project with no-one pulling the wrong way....

...It was also good to see the PM and state premiers work together and deliver the same message across the nation. It gave me confidence that we can speed up the process and enable us to get back to our normal (but changed) lives. Unfortunately, Victoria seems to want to go alone which makes it hard to understand where we are at. One of the worst things about these events is not the event itself but when there is no stability. As small business operators we need a consistent message for at least a week or so to allow us to plan and adjust.

We all know that the virus is going to kill people and put huge pressures on our medical system. We are also being told that if we slow the rate of spread then the death rate will be reduced and the health system more able to cope. So, we have the business lock downs and only essential services will be allowed to operate. We haven't been told what an essential service is but after seeing the horrible queues and statistics on unemployment, I feel that any business that can employ people in a low risk environment is an essential business.

So far, the nursery sector has been okay, but this could change at any time. We are going into winter which is traditionally slow but maybe a bit better this year. If the retailers are allowed to trade, then our industry may not be so hard hit. People will want to garden as it is an outdoor activity and it gives a sense of control over their own lives. We have had none of our autumn plant fairs so there is pent up demand for them when they return in spring. Indeed, I suspect that we will be back in full trade by spring and people will be keen to spruce up their homes and to get into the garden. Now is a good time for nurseries it put stock on the ground for an early and busy spring. If it isn't on the ground, you can't sell it.

The following quote describes Australian economy over the last six months:

Sir Austen Chamberlain, addressing the annual meeting of Birmingham Unionist Association
 "It is not so long ago that a member of the Diplomatic Body in London, who had spent some years of his service in China, told me that there was a Chinese curse which took the form of saying, 'May you live in interesting times.' There is no doubt that the curse has fallen on us."

"We move from one crisis to another. We suffer one disturbance and shock after another."

This proverb has no real origin as a Chinese curse but seems to have come from the UK.

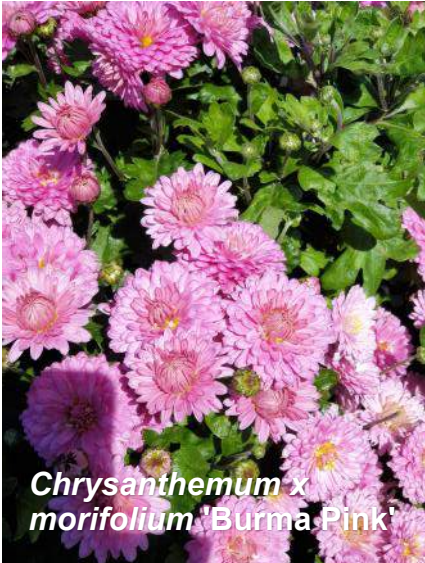

Keep well, look after yourself and you family and we will all be here in winter and spring.
